Thermal Massage Bed

Responding to the growing demand for alternative health care products that help integrate Eastern and Western medical practices, South Korea's Migun Medical Instrument Co. is making its Thermal Massage Bed more broadly available to the U.S. market through its Los Angeles-based Migun USA Corp. The Migun Thermal Massage Bed gives users many of the benefits of Eastern acupuncture, acupressure, massage therapy and heat therapy all in the convenience of their own home, says the company. Using Western helium heat technology, the self-care Migun Thermal Massage Bed actually improves on these techniques by applying both pressure and heat to healing points along the spine.

The unit has been popular in South Korea and in China for some time. In 1999, it was introduced to the Asian American community in the U.S., where more than 20,000 beds have been sold. Migun is now pushing to make a broader U.S. market aware of the product, especially health-conscious baby boomers and seniors. Migun recently received a medical instrument classification approval from the Food and Drug Administration, the first company in the thermal massage bed industry to receive such recognition.

Migun beds are sold directly to customers at Migun Demonstration Centers, which are individually owned by local business partners. Migun USA has 47 Demonstration Centers in 16 states. At these Centers, the public may use free trial sessions. The company is participating in trade shows and other promotional and marketing activities to build a network of Demonstration Centers. You can find out more about starting this business selling the Migun beds by visiting www.migunworld.com or by calling 213-388-3300.

Tara and Renee McKinley of Ann Arbor, Michigan, are sisters who opened their own Migun Center in January 2004. They sold 21 beds in one month (about $2700 per bed). That translates to $56,000. The initial investment to get started is about $100,000 so it is possible to recoup the startup in a relatively quick timeframe.

Mobile Spa Business

First, mobile hairdressers came to you, then massage therapists, then came the makeup artists. Now it is time for mobile day spas. MobileSPA, a full service day spa that travels to you at your office, hotel or home announces aggressive expansion throughout the United States and Canada due to increasing demand from clients.

"Our concept emerged from the demand of society and now we identified a serious need for expansion. We receive calls from all over the United States and Canada enquiring about our services," says Devika Mukherjee, Founder and Managing Partner at mobileSPA.

"We envision mobileSPA to have a very high standard at every location. In order to provide top-notch services, we are in the process of carefully selecting our partners.

"Our commitment is organized into two major groups—Partner location development, which focuses on branding the chain, and partnership Support Services, which is dedicated solely to supporting our mobile spa owners. This concept means that mobileSPA is committed to building a strong company of individual mobile spas as well as increasing brand recognition through the development of new locations.

"Depending on your location you will be given the website name—for example, if you are in Florida, you get mobilespaflorida.com or mobilespaorlando.com, or mobilespanyc.com, etc. With our Internet marketing efforts this will ensure that your site comes up whenever the popular keywords are searched for. Additionally, being listed under LOCATIONS on our website will provide you with great exposure. Design your website maintaining the theme of mobilespa.com with one flash page similar to mobilespa.com," according to the company.

Help is provided in the areas of hosting setup, email setup, corporate presentations, hotel presentations, house party programs, hotel accounts, classified ads, information on hiring and much more.
